Description:

The Porsche 911 S 2.4 Targa is considered one of the most desirable F-series models of the early 1970s. In particular, the so-called “oil flap model” enjoys an exceptional reputation among Porsche enthusiasts, as this version was produced only for a very short period of time. The powerful 2.4-liter six-cylinder boxer engine producing 190 hp combines sporty performance with the characteristic driving experience of the classic air-cooled 911 generation.

Only 989 examples of this rare 911 S Targa version were delivered worldwide. The vehicle offered here stands out with its largely unrestored original condition and its attractive color combination of Light Yellow with black interior and classic Pepita seat inserts. In 1998, the car was repainted in its original delivery color. Over the years, the mechanical components have been maintained and revised as required. According to the available Porsche certificate, the color scheme, engine, and transmission correspond to the original delivery specification. A rare opportunity to acquire a particularly original oil flap model.

Engine: 6-cylinder boxer engine, 2,341 cc, 140 kW (190 hp)
